the same time?

There is a friend of mine in New York city to whom I have talked my plans for a dozen years, and he is unable to see what I am trying to do, or how I can do what I tell him I want to do. I may meet a stranger this afternoon who will see through my system of research, and in five minutes become an enthusiastic supporter of it. When our friends are blind to our plans and predict failure, there is to endure, but the hardest thing to endure is to have a friend disappointed over your success, because the friend has predicted failure. Sometimes this happens.

Why and When. A request comes for information on halloween. No doubt but meny wonder what and why and when started about this event the next day after it occurs. In the cyclopedia we read that it is a name popularly given to the eve or vigil of All Hailows, or festival of All Saints. It started centuries ago as a pleasant and harmless evening of recreation, but to-day it has been perverted so that property destroyed and people injured in the name of fun and it now needs retorm-

An Art to Impart.

A college man tells me about a won-derful entertainer who failed when he tried to be a teacher. There is a difference between an exhibit of skill which produces admiration or wonder and a presentation of information in a way to increase the knowledge and ability of the hearer. The victor in a contest may or may not be a good trainer for others.

HIS EXPERIENCE.

He is a big man and a young back-ler, and as we talked on the train he fold me this: "I love to have children in the house—that is one of the many reasons why I think of getting mar-ried. The study of the little children is one of the most interesting things to me, and it seems to me a mother abould be an entertainer for the chilshould be an entertainer for the children as well as a parent to them. It seems to me I should want a boy first. First a daughter, then a son, then another world's begun, but for the daughter's cake I think it is nice for her to have an elder brother. It may be better for the mother to have the daughter first. I am inclined to think the kindergarton is for children without a healthy home; that nothing should come between the intelligent mother and her child. The mothers of Washington and Garfield did well with their children, showing it is the with their children, showing it is the ideal home that gives the best schooling. Kindergarten workers are of great service to mothers in furnishing them with valuable information. I have noticed how children love to see things made for them. A little one that was visiting us wanted a pistol to hold a firecracker, so we went down into the workshop, and, finding a cent, broad noses 12 per cent and re-tourd, we marked it out, sawed it and trousse noses 14 per cent. bored a bole. The little one was more interested in the making of it than the using of it afterward. Children never worry me. I love to have them climb

POSTGRADUATE TUITION.

When we let the electric light burn all night in the basement it is an error, an unnecessary expense and omes under postgraduate tuitious.

After we had done so neveral times I began studying for preventive measures and found that if I turned the button before coming through the basement doorway I would not leave the light on. The wall button for the basement light is in the kitchen by the door which opens on the basement stairs. My discovery was an sxiom, but it helped me start a habit of not passing through the door until I reached through and around, turned the button and saw the light go off. But my wife had to have another kind of a memory helper. Milk costs money and she likes milk for pantry and table. Her farm home in early life educated her that way. To her nothing else seems so important for the price as a bottle of milk. I reasoned this out and then told her that when she forgot the basement light for a night it meant a bottle of milk. This made her stop and think and remember. With an occasional error we are having success in keeping the basement dark when not in use.

How Did He Do It? The man was ready to take a trip. He told a lady clerk to forward his mail to a certain town. The cierk replied: "I always get that town mixed up with another town." The man took an irritation about it that is difficult a pencil and said: "I will write the but after be had left it was discovered that he had written the name of the wrong town, which the lady had mentioned as always worrying her. When informed by mail what he had done the man would not believe it until be returned and saw his own penmanship. When he told me about this error I began studying with him on how it was possible for him to make such an error, and we agreed that his ear and hand must have worked together without his head, of while his mind was on some other blint and as his ear had hearst wrong town last wrote that unco

While the American ceasus is in the nature of a national "account of stock," embracing inquiries relating to population, mortality, agriculture and manufacture, that of other countries is generally confined to an enumera tion of population by sex, age, nativity, conjugal conditions, occupation, etc., and in some cases details relating to dwellings.

Always an Eye to Business.

A merry-go-round man at La Crosse, Kan, got his leg caught in the cable of his machine. The crowd could hear the leg crack, as it was broken in neveral places. The machine was clogged and stopped.
